There are seemingly millions of smartphone apps out there designed to make traveling easier, but not all of them are very good. Here are some of the apps that have been found to be most helpful while on the road:

FlightAware
You can see exactly where your flight (or any other flight) is at the moment. Were you told your airplane is coming from Dallas, but it’s still not there and you should be boarding? Go to FlightAware to see where the plane is right now. http://flightaware.com/mobile

GateGuru
GateGuru gives you the rundown on which stores and restaurants are in each airport terminal and it pulls in reviews as well. If you’re in an airport looking for a particular product or service, this will make your task much easier. http://gateguruapp.com/

WorldMate
WorldMate is an all-in-one travel assistant that will help you better manage travel and keep all your travel plans in one place. It builds your travel itineraries and puts it in the application. Sign up today on your Short’s travel portal and send all itineraries to your WorldMate application. http://www.worldmate.com/

Taxi Magic
If you don’t know a city well, finding a taxi can be confusing. Where is the best place to hail a cab? How much should you pay? Taxi Magic makes it a lot easier. If there’s a participating cab company in your city, Taxi Magic will have a cab sent right to you. http://taximagic.com/

Your Airline App
This isn’t one app; it’s dependent upon which airline you fly. If you fly a different airline every time, then it’s probably not worth downloading every single airline app. But if you’re a loyalist, you should absolutely have it.

- United: https://mobile.united.com/