Comments from the Chair:

Today is August 3. A prospective student and her family were given a tour of the building by Bonnie and they asked if I could meet with them for a few minutes afterwards. One of the first questions the Dad posed to me was “should I let my daughter major in theatre?” If I had $5 for every time I’ve answered this question over the last 30 years, I’d be retired and no longer coming up with thoughtful responses to this query. It’s a valid question. Many people wonder why the arts should be included in a university setting and many parents worry about the type of future a performing arts major can pursue.

The excerpt below appeared in an issue of The Association of American Colleges and Universities a few years back. It is titled “The Place of the Arts in a Liberal Education” by David Oxtoby. It begins by addressing the performing arts as viable majors and then explores their place within a university.

“The fact that the creative and performing arts are not always an easy fit for colleges and universities is actually an important reason to include them. Their “angularity” helps challenge our campuses and push boundaries. There are at least four strong arguments for placing these fields at the heart of our institutions, rather than at the margins.

1. Impact on society. As public funding for the arts has diminished, especially in the United States, our colleges and universities are among the few places where creative talent is supported and where the creation of art can be promoted for its own sake, regardless of immediate commercial value. Young artists sometimes launch their careers while teaching at colleges, while theatre directors may balance college instruction with directing plays off campus. In many towns, the local college or university is the primary community resource for arts programs. As secondary schools reduce funding for arts education, some students have their first direct arts experiences when they reach college and try out an arts course. For the arts to flourish in society, the college years present a critical window of opportunity to foster social and cultural responsibility. Many alumni speak of how their college education in the arts started them on a course of lifelong learning. A student's experience of the role of the arts on campus will shape her or his expectations and community involvement well beyond college.

2. Helping students “push their boundaries.” Many students arrive on college campuses as accomplished-or at least experienced-test-takers, familiar with standardized tests, short-response essays, and problem solving. A great deal of the curriculum feels quite comfortable for such students. But put such a student into, say, a theatre class when he has never attempted that art, and he will be pushed out of his comfort zone. Work in the creative and performing arts represents a different type of learning from that in traditional classroom settings, and it can challenge a student and ultimately give him more confidence.
3. The arts and experiential education. Arts programs pull the education of students from the theoretical toward the practical. The actual experience of performing or creating a work of art is messy, taxing, repetitive, and serendipitous. It is not that every art historian needs to learn to paint a picture in order to be successful in his or her academic career, but the experience of creating or performing in a rigorous setting provides a practical understanding of the creative process that cannot help but inform both the professional and amateur understanding of the arts for students in college and throughout their lives. An active program in the creative and performing arts can be considered an extension of the move toward “experiential education” that is primarily associated with the social sciences. Just as a sociology course can benefit from a team project connected to a community-based organization, so too a music history student develops “embodied knowledge” from singing a madrigal with the college chamber choir, or by trying her hand at electronic composition. Arts disciplines and their emphasis on practical technique, embodied knowledge, imagination, design, and observation have a critical contribution to make toward new paradigms across the sciences, social sciences, and humanities.

4. Teaching creativity. Innovation and creativity are core goals of the twenty-first-century economy. It is a truism that success in the future will involve making new connections and coming up with new ideas, not simply using one's training in a well-defined career. The education for such a world needs to respond to this demand, and that requires core courses taken by students during their time in college. The creative arts are thus one of the vital components of a modern liberal education, as they develop a different set of capacities that students will benefit from long after graduation. Alumni who have taken only a few arts-related courses frequently cite those experiences as among the most formative for their current work, even if the connections are indirect. To prepare creative citizens and leaders, all creative capacities should be fostered through college education.

Conclusion

As they set goals, our colleges and universities need to consider the central role of the arts. The quality of spaces allocated to studio and performing arts is a statement on institutional priorities, as is the investment in arts faculty, balancing full-time tenured faculty members with visiting artists and part-time instructors. How we treat artistic interest and experience in admissions helps determine our student body. The display of public art, as well as that of student and museum-based art, shapes the aesthetic sensibilities of students. The role and priority of the arts-creation, experience, integration-characterized an institution as strongly as any other aspect. As Dana Gioia has said, “Art is an irreplaceable way of understanding and expressing the world—equal to but distinct from scientific and conceptual methods.....Art awakens, enlarges, refines, and restores our humanity.” Curricula on college campuses are the product of politics and compromise, and it is never possible to include everything that might be desirable in a student's education. Balance between the sciences, social sciences, and humanities, and the teaching of skills from critical reasoning to writing to numeracy might seem to be more than enough to fill a required program of study. But making room within the curriculum for courses teaching the discipline and refinement of technique that allow students to express themselves creatively can pay off in more broadly educated students who will build on that creativity in their future lives and careers.

In The Next Room (or The Vibrator Play) by Sarah Ruhl
Nominated for the 2010 Tony Award for Best Play and Selected as a Finalist for the 2010 Pulitzer Prize

"Hovering at the dawn of electricity," Dr Givings, a scientist, happily embraces his invention with which he can cure his patients' (primarily female) "hysteria". His wife, Mrs. Givings, a new mother, is consistently pulled toward the sounds emanating from the next room. With the innocent aid given her by the other characters--a distraught female patient and her upright husband, a midwife assistant, an African-American wet nurse and a male artist, Mrs. Givings pursues the light that can infuse her marriage with loving intimacy and open the heavens to delight here on earth. The playwright Sara Ruhl enlightens us with her tender, sometimes hilarious contemporary take on a comedy of manners set in the Victorian era.

The Caucasian Chalk Circle by Bertolt Brecht,
A version by Frank McGuinness

Written towards the end of WWII and decidedly anti-Nazi, Brecht's "The Caucasian Chalk Circle," is a play about politics, law, justice, parenthood and more. What defines a family? Who is responsible for taking care of mother earth?... of each other?... of our society? Brecht weaves comedy and drama throughout the play as his characters dance to life's song. These characters are archetypes and larger than life thereby allowing the audience a mirror in which to view the choices we make, as compared to the choices the characters make. Whose side are we on? In Brecht’s theater the audience is expected to think as well as be entertained. He believed that unless an actor is having fun, the audience can’t! Moving, funny, thought provoking, challenging… what more could an audience want?

columbinus by the United States Theatre Project
Written By Stephen Karam and PJ Paparelli, Dramaturgy by Patricia Hersch, Conceived by PJ Paparelli

Sparked by the April 1999 massacre at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colorado, columbinus is a meeting of fact and fiction that illuminates the realities of adolescent culture by exploring the events surrounding the shootings. The play weaves together excerpts from discussions with parents, survivors and community leaders in Littleton as well as police evidence to bring to light the dark recesses of American adolescence. The New York Post said this drama is “a powerful and important piece about the churning rage that’s all too likely to bubble over again one day.” Join us for this compelling, unnerving study that bears witnessing.

Legally Blonde book by Heather Hach
Music and Lyrics by Laurence O'Keefe and Nell Benjamin
Based on the Novel by Amanda Brown and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Motion Picture

Perfectly pink and infused with fun, frivolity and a come-from-behind, feel-good story, this upbeat musical comedy tells the tale of Elle Woods, a blonde sorority-sister valley girl who heads to Harvard Law School to win back her boyfriend, a big case, and our hearts while staying true to herself. Nominated for seven Tony Awards, Legally Blonde the musical is based on the novel by Amanda Brown and the 2001 MGM hit movie starring Reese Witherspoon.

The Caucasian Chalk Circle
By Bertolt Brecht

The Caucasian Chalk Circle, a version by Frank McGuinness, is a classic story. It's a morality play set in a stylized world that could exist in any time or place. The story follows a young woman and her travels in rearing an abandoned young boy. By the end of the play the boy's biological mother wants the boy back. The question remains how do you define 'family'? How do we take care of each other and the world? What is the 'law' or the 'spirit of the law'?

MAJORS/MINORS MEETING

All Students Are Welcome

Wednesday, 9/16/15, 5:15-6:30 PM in J Studio

FREE FOOD and ENTERTAINMENT from several of our talented students.

Find out what is going on, what is planned for the year, meet the faculty, guest artists, staff, other students and maybe, just maybe, Theatre alum. Have fun, catch up with your old pals, make some new ones and enter the raffle for prizes...goodies from the Emporium and other places.

Agenda items? Just send them to Paula, paulam@uri.edu (Theatre Chair) via email prior to the meeting.

SEE YOU THERE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Upperclassmen in THE 499...remember your first meeting? If you are in THE 499 as a mentor, bring along your students or arrange to meet them there. Welcome to all.

LOCKERS AND MAILBOXES

Theatre students and key production personnel have a mailbox located in the main Theatre hallway, 2nd floor. Lockers are available to Theatre students and are located inside the mens and ladies dressing rooms. Unlocked in the AM, relocked by the Stage Manager. in PM. Stop by Room. H206 for information.
A FEW SEATS AVAILABLE....REGISTER TODAY!!!

THE 161 Introduction to Stagecraft  Lecture on Wednesday from 3:30-5:15 and then choose a lab at same time on Mondays or Fridays. Taught by Jake Hegnauer for 3 credits and this class must be taken by all theatre majors BEFORE starting their junior year.

THE 250 Costume Construction  Same schedule as Stagecraft above. Taught this year by Professor David Howard and again, it is required of all theatre majors before starting their junior year. 3 credits.

THE 321 Introduction to Directing  Taught by Professor Bryna Wortman, this class meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2-3:50 PM. It is a 3-credit class and it is required of all theatre majors. At present, there are 2 slots available but you must obtain a permission number from Bryna in order to register. Priority is awarded to seniors for graduation and to directing concentration majors.

THE 350 Makeup  This year, Makeup will be taught by guest instructor, Amanda Downing Carney. This class meets on Mondays only from 4-5:50 PM in the dressing rooms. It is required of acting concentrates and Design/Tech concentrates and it is worth 1 credit. Underclassmen will need a permission number from the Chair.

THE 362 Scene Painting  Get this class while you can. It is only offered every 3 or 4 years and it meets on Monday evenings from 7-9:45 PM. Taught by guest instructor, Cheryl deWardener, it is recommended for all Design/Tech concentrates as one of their “pick 12” options and it's a great class for anyone with an artistic flair and a desire to learn. Permission numbers available through the Chair.

THE 381 History of Theatre to 1642  Required course for all theatre majors worth 3 credits. The class meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9:30-10:45. No permission number required and it is taught by Professor Christian Wittwer.

THE 499 Senior Seminar  1-credit course team taught by Professors Howard, McGlasson and Wortman. Open to all seniors to help bridge the path from the academic into the professional theatre. Featuring frequent guest speakers and though it is not required for graduation, it is most helpful to all intending to pursue theatre as a profession. Wednesdays only from 12-12:50 PM.

For additional information or permission numbers to any course, please email Paula McGlasson at paulam@uri.edu.

Theatre 100 will start off with a bang this Fall! Instead of holding our mandatory TA and Shadow meeting in H101, we will be attending a leadership workshop with the URI North Woods Challenge Course on Tuesday, September 8, 2015 from 10 AM to 1:30 PM. This leadership conference involves rope climbing, tree climbing and team building fun. We will finish with the retreat at noon and continue at the FAC where our Theatre Department will treat us to lunch in G Studio. During lunch, we will supply you with your handbook information, our bi-annual pep-talk and something BETTER than a THE 100 t-shirt!

The URI North Woods Challenge Course is located at 590 Old North Road, less than ¼ mile north of the Compass School via an access gate on the west side marking the entrance to the North Woods Challenge Course parking lot.

The North Woods is home to 13 low challenge course elements, 3 high elements and a 50’ outdoor climbing tower. In the fall 2013 semester, we opened a new indoor climbing facility with 3 additional high elements. All challenge course equipment and facilities are inspected each calendar year and meet Association for Challenge Course Technology (ACCT) standards. Our Adventure Team is comprised of URI staff and students who complete a safety and facilitation training led by Project Adventure, Inc. trained professionals.

Our outdoor elements are nestled in a thickly wooded setting off of the dirt access road, so participants truly get the experience of being in nature despite being only approximately one mile from the main URI Kingston campus. The North Woods offers a beautiful setting for your team to focus on communication strategies, problem solving, leadership development, and teamwork.

Attendance is MANDATORY for all TAs and Shadows and it's going to be a blast! Anyone interested in shadowing should contact Maria ASAP so you can participate in the leadership retreat.

At this time there are two TA spots open in the afternoon session. We are looking for a Company TA and a Tech TA for Costuming.

Please contact Maria by email (mariaday@uri.edu) or by phone at 742-0367 to confirm your participation in this great workshop.

WELCOME NEW FACES FOR FALL 2015

Alison Walker Carrier: Please join me in welcoming our newly appointed Costume Shop Manager, Ms. Alison Walker Carrier. A proud graduate of Syracuse University with a BFA in Theatre Design, she possesses 19 years of experience in a variety of professional costuming positions. From Costume Design intern for Bucknell University to Cutter/Draper at Theatre-by-the-Sea to Costume Coordinator between Syracuse University and Syracuse Stage, Alison eventually landed at Trinity Rep in Providence where she worked as a Cutter/Draper until she assumed the role of Costume Shop Director. Though she greatly enjoyed her work at Trinity Rep, she wished to return to an educational environment where in the past, her own enthusiasm grew when she was part of a learning atmosphere. In her own words “I gain such satisfaction from assisting someone to learn a new skill or gain a new understanding.” There is much to be learned from Alison and I'm sure the faculty, staff and students at URI Theatre will benefit greatly from this new partnership.
