Dr. Valerie Stehling is head of the research group “Digital Learning Environments” at the Cybernetics Lab of RWTH Aachen University in Germany. The primary research focus of her group lies on the development, testing and evaluation of innovative methods in interdisciplinary and intercultural teaching and learning processes in Engineering Education. She is a communication scientist and sociologist and has been working at the faculty for Mechanical Engineering for more than a decade.