Justin Leahey is the Massachusetts Institute of Technology’s MIT-Germany Program Manager. Part of MIT’s International Science and Technology initiative, the program sends 80 – 100 students to Germany each year in a variety of capacities and fosters collaborations between faculty at MIT and at universities and research institutions across Germany. Previously, he worked at Harvard Law School and at the University of Freiburg. He holds a master’s degree in International Relations from Humboldt University of Berlin and a bachelor’s degree in International Relations and German Studies from Tufts University.