

Graduate Teaching Assistantship, Music Performance

Department of Music, University of Rhode Island

●Applications due February 1

Graduate Teaching Assistantships are available to students admitted to the Master of Music in Performance. The degree offers three tracks: vocal or instrumental performance, including jazz; conducting; and composition. Assistantship applicants submit their materials as part of the standard graduate application, due February 1, with a minimum of two letters of recommendation.

Application deadline: February 1

Letters of recommendation: a minimum of two, submitted as part of the application, not separately

Choose a track

Performance

Vocal or instrumental performance, including jazz.

Conducting

Graduate study in choral or instrumental conducting.

Composition

Graduate study in music composition.

Applicants to the performance and conducting tracks submit a link to an audition recording. Applicants to the composition track submit a link to a composition portfolio.

How to apply

1 Complete the graduate application

Submit the standard application with a minimum of two letters of recommendation.

2 Add your audition or portfolio link

Place the link on its own separate PDF document, uploaded under Additional Materials.

3 Add a cover letter

Under Additional Materials, explain your interest in the assistantship and describe any previous teaching experience.

4 Add your resume

Upload your resume, also under Additional Materials.

Resources

Graduate School application portal

web.uri.edu/graduate-school/admission

Music audition information

web.uri.edu/music/auditions