November Peace Post

In a world filled with violence, the Center for Nonviolence and Peace Studies works tirelessly to further our mission of peace. Check out what we did in November, and how you can support us this month.

Visit our Website

Coming in December: Sandy Hook Memorial

On Dec. 14 from 12 – 1 p.m., the Center for Nonviolence and Peace Studies will be having a memorial in the University of Rhode Island library to honor the victims of gun violence at Sandy Hook elementary school, and all other school shootings since.

Tancrell scholarship recipient returns to URI, continues peacebuilding efforts

Acenel Laurent, an environmental peacemaker from Haiti, was the 2018 recipient of the Tancrell Scholarship, a fund supporting the training and education of a future generation of global peacemakers.

Read more

Tibetan Buddhist shares perspectives on finding happiness

On Nov. 8, Geshe Dadul Namygal spoke at the University of Rhode Island to students, faculty and friends from the community
Read more about his perspectives and research on finding happiness.

Students at Quest Montessori School teach peace

The Center for Nonviolence and Peace Studies was invited to a special program presented by the 7th and 8th graders of the Quest Montessori School in Narragansett, R.I. on Nov. 15 under the guidance of teacher and nonviolence trainer, Lacey Feeley.

Read more

Spotlight on Geshe Thupten Tendhar

The Center's Geshe Thupten Tendhar was featured in the University of Rhode Island magazine for being a "big thinker" and sharing his perspectives on being at peace.

Read more