MASH FOR THE MILLENNIUM

A now retired U.S. Navy physician describes the state of battlefield medicine in the 21st century.

His presentation centers about the care provided to, and the evacuation of, casualties from Kandahar Airfield in southern Afghanistan.

Warning: There will be some disturbing images in the talk.

Mike McCarten earned his medical degree in 1983 and on graduation was commissioned a lieutenant in the United States Navy, beginning a 30-year career that led to travel to 24 countries on five continents, including command of the NATO trauma hospital in Kandahar, Afghanistan, overseeing 500 U.S. Navy, Army, Air Force, and NATO medical personnel. He retired from the Navy in 1983 and from clinical medicine in 2023. A native of Cranston, he now resides in Charlestown, RI.
