ABOUT OUR SPEAKER

Stephanie Arne

Stephanie Arne is an accomplished international wildlife conservationist, expedition guide, TV personality, and a spirited and engaging storyteller.

She is the former host of Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom and appeared on Animal Planet, The Weather Channel, the Harry Connick Jr. Show, and The Drew Barrymore Show. She has also been a brand ambassador for Scubapro and CuriosityStream. Her insight has earned her a seat on the Association of Zoos and Aquariums Lion SAFE (Saving Animals from Extinction) committee and the International Union of Conservation Nature's (IUCN) Education and Communication Commission.

Stephanie has worked with – and learned from – conservation leaders, oil spill responders, microplastic experts, ecotourism CEOs, farmers, fishermen in Africa, Australia, Malaysia, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, and the United States. Steph and her husband, wildlife artist Tim Davison, lived in a 180 sq.ft–tiny house featured on Tiny House Big Living on HGTV for five years; two on a U.S. speaking tour focused on sustainable living and three parked in California during the pandemic.

Stephanie aims to empower future conservationists and humanity to be better stewards of our shared natural world. Her mission is to show audiences examples of how passionate people sharing diverse perspectives, unique talents, and skills solve complex conservation issues. Working together, these stewards help increase biodiversity and create a healthier planet for all living things.
