REPORT OF FUNDED AND UNFUNDED PROJECTS

Past Funded

2018 – 2021	Developing the First Concussion Rehabilitation Program Specifically Tailored for Youth with ADHD: An Exercise-Based Approach Augmented with Virtual Reality Mindfulness Training to Improve Physical, Emotional, and Cognitive Health Louis V. Gerstner III Research Scholar Award, MGH Psychiatry Department Principal Investigator (PI) ($150,000) The major goal of this study is to develop tailored treatment and rehabilitation strategies designed explicitly for the unique needs of youth with ADHD who sustain concussion, incorporating mind-body strategies (e.g., mindfulness meditation) to manage chronic symptoms. To promote treatment engagement and compliance, skills transfer, and experiential learning, the mindfulness training will be delivered through virtual reality.
2023–2024	Rehabilitation for Young Children with Persistent Post-Concussion Symptoms Research Accelerator Program Development Grant, Spaulding Research Institute PI ($59,545) The major goal is to pilot and refine a first-of-its-kind, holistic, activity-based and health behavior-focused, concussion treatment and rehabilitation program developmentally tailored for the unique physical and psychological developmental needs of young children, ages 5 to 12. Such a program does not currently exist. The ultimate goal is to disseminate an evidence-based rehabilitation program that can be implemented in diverse clinical settings by a diverse range of healthcare providers to restore children's health.

2019-2024 The Spectrum of Concussion: Predictors of Clinical Recovery, Treatment and Rehabilitation, and Possible Long-Term Effects
National Football League
Co-Investigator (PI: Grant L. Iverson, Ph.D.)
The goal of this research program is to comprehensively examine concussion including the acute effects, functional recovery, treatment and rehabilitation for youth who are slow to recover, possible long-term effects on brain health, and rehabilitation of retired amateur collision sport athletes. Our research will have direct relevance to clinical care across the spectrum of concussion, from children to retired former athletes.

Submitted

2025-2026 Specialist and Pediatrician Co-Management for Early and Effective Concussion Care Delivery to Hasten Your Recovery (SPEEDY Recovery): A Pilot Study
Injury Control COBRE Pilot, Rhode Island Hospital
PI ($50,000), Application Pending
The major goal is to pilot and refine a first-of-its-kind care delivery model whereby concussion specialists are available to co-manage injuries with primary care pediatricians via telehealth in order to close the gap that currently exists in delivering specialty care to more youth. The long-term objective and intended impact of this project is to disseminate a care delivery model and manualized behavioral health intervention that can be widely deployed to make specialty concussion care accessible to more youth and earlier following their head injury.

Unfunded

2024 Implementing PEDS (Pediatric Education and Decision Support) to Improve Concussion Care in Children and Youth (1R01HD119179-01)
National Institutes of Health
Co-Investigator ($1,545,678 total; my portion: $164,452), Unfunded
The major goal of this project was to: i) understand the point of entry, path of medical care, and how variance in patterns of care predict outcomes for youth who sustain concussion; ii) determine whether differences in care during the initial visit following a concussion predicts outcomes in youth, using a novel information source, a state-wide health information exchange; and iii) provide a best-practice implementation intervention to increase the use of standardized symptom checklist, visio-vestibular exam documentation, and provision of anticipatory guidance recommendations.

Clinical Innovations

Post-Acute Care Evaluation (PACE) Clinic/MGHfC (2020-2021)	I was an original member of a brand-new multidisciplinary clinic for children who had critical illnesses or traumatic injuries and required care in the MGHfC pediatric intensive care unit (PICU). Locally, this new clinic provided crucial follow-up assessment and rehabilitation planning for children treated in the PICU and was hoped to serve as a model to encourage similar follow-up clinics for these vulnerable children and their families.
