5. Your audience wants to hear from you, but doesn’t want to receive be bombarded with emails.
Email marketing is a incredible opportunity to connect with your audience.

HOWEVER!!!!

As with ALL your marketing efforts, your communication needs to be client centered.
Step 1: Your Offer

5 Ways to Grow Your Email List
Website Pop-Up

Pop-up forms provide visitors with a quick, convenient way to share contact information and subscribe to your list while they’re browsing your site.

They’re easy to add to your site, and they’re proven to work.

Studies show that pop ups have, on average, a 3.9% conversion rate.

Step 2: Engage Your Subscribers
Welcome Them

Create a plan to nurture your new email subscribers. Make sure they received an email right away when they join your list. You will have wasted your time and effort is if your subscribers leave soon after joining or never read your emails. Your unsubscribe rates affects your quality school in your email service provider! In fact, subscribers who read one welcome email go on to read 40% more content from the sender than those who don’t!

Create a welcome sequence

A welcome sequence is a set of automated emails that deliver to subscribers right after they join your list. Welcome emails are important for setting the tone of the relationship right from the beginning, establishing expectations, creating a welcoming atmosphere, building trust, and reducing unsubscribes.
Email Statistics

1. The average open rate for a welcome email is 50%. That makes it 86% more effective than standard newsletters.

2. 76% of people expect to receive a welcome email immediately after subscribing to your list.

3. Users who receive a welcome email show 40% more engagement with the brand.

Step 3: Add Value
Don’t Let Your List Sit Idly

BRING SOMETHING TO THE TABLE

Share something that will make your subscribers’ days better, whether it’s a story, lesson, or something else.

Here are some quick tips for ensuring value with every email:

1. Write content with a narrow focus instead of jumping from topic to topic
2. Pay attention to what your audience wants by tracking open rates and clicks
3. Don’t just be promotional, give value more than you sell
Conclusion
It takes multiple interactions within a potential customer to make a purchase. Not everyone who visits your website or social media profile is immediately ready to buy. Building an email list allows you to begin that sales conversation with potential customers.

Without an email list, you might lose out on potential clients or customers just because they found you at the wrong time. Collect their email address, show up in their inbox at regular intervals to strategically educate them until they are ready to buy.
