Mr. Saccoccio made comments regarding the Open Meetings and Public Records Laws. He gave a summary of the laws found in Enclosure 2a.

Mr. Saccoccio explained that the Open Meeting laws allows for business to be conducted in an open and transparent manner. A majority of the voting members of the public body, or quorum, must be present at open meetings in order for business to occur. He also cautioned Board members against participating in a rolling quorum and outlined the parameters of the violations. Finally, he let the Board members know that any records on personal cell phones, computers, tablets, etc. about the URI Board meetings will be subject to public records request.

Mr. Saccoccio explained the purpose of the Executive Sessions, letting the Board know that these sessions are closed to the public. Executive Sessions are allowed for a limited number of reasons. He asked the Board members to review the closed meeting checklist provided to them at an earlier time. Additionally, in Executive Session the Board members may not discuss anything that has not been previously voted upon by the Board as a reason for going into Executive Session. The group may maintain sealed minutes for Executive Sessions; however, it must be done by a majority vote.

Mr. Saccoccio also mentioned the importance of annual and supplemental notice for the public. Furthermore, he explained that the agenda becomes public notice and must be voted upon during the meeting if changes occur. Mr. Saccoccio touched upon the procedure of public records requests and let the Board know a written policy must be in place for these requests.

6. President’s Report

A. The state of the University during the Covid-19 pandemic

President Dooley shared that URI has approximately 100 students still living on campus. No layoffs or furloughs have occurred at URI as of Friday April 17, 2020. All classes have transitioned to online delivery and the transition has been largely positive for both faculty and students.

The URI Faculty Senate led the faculty to adopt a new grading policy that is thoughtful, compassionate, and flexible. Students can make an informed decision to take a letter grade or a satisfactory or unsatisfactory grade that will have no impact on their GPA.

URI has also been able to greatly assist the state of Rhode Island. They have done this through the conversion of CPAP machines into ventilators by URI’s engineering department. Additionally, URI’s dining services have donated food throughout the state to nursing homes and care facilities. Additionally, URI’s pharmacy is making hand sanitizer for distribution to first responders. Finally, IT professionals have donated time and technology devices to patients in hospitals impacted by COVID-19 who would otherwise not have access or training to this technology allowing them to communicate with loved ones.

Commencement has been postponed until Fall 2020. There is a dedicated group of people working hard to create a meaningful and impactful event honoring the graduates. Online learning will continue through the summer with the goal is to continually innovate online class delivery. Final decisions about class delivery for Fall 2020 have not been made. The University is awaiting advice from healthcare and medical professionals regarding social distancing and education policies.

Enrollment is currently being reevaluated. Prior to COVID, there were 23,744 applications to URI for Fall 2020. However, at this time, there is no real estimate available for newly enrolled and returning students for Fall 2020. An estimate will not be available until mid-to-late summer. Naturally, this has budgetary implications and steps are being taken to alleviate some of the financial stress. These steps include both a hiring and an end-of-year spending pause. Finally, the University has a $22 million emergency fund that will be used very strategically. This along with federal and state funds will help carry URI through this crisis.

Student representative Christopher Bove asked: what happens with housing and dining services, the auxiliary funded departments, in terms of budget because they are self-sustaining?

President Dooley responded by sharing that URI has refunded back 25% of housing and dining fees back to the students which caused the University to take a $9 million hit to the auxiliary budgets. Conferences and events also took a hit due to the high amount of cancellations for summer events. The University is watching these budgets very carefully because revenue hits will happen. There are reserve funds in place to help alleviate some stress should URI not convene these services again in Fall 2020. The goal is to develop strategies to help replenish the reserve funds used as soon as possible with the understanding that they will ultimately be depleted in the short term. Ultimately, URI does not want to add financial burden to students who are currently impacted by the COVID crisis, so the University will rely heavily on federal financial aid to help with budgetary concerns surrounding auxiliary services.

Student representative Christopher Bove then asked: some courses are running remotely at the same time that the previous in-seat classes would typically run. What is being done for students who are either deployed or essential workers who are forced to work during the set time these classes are now being held online?

President Dooley responded by sharing that online delivery needs to change so that the content is accessible to students on their terms. The goal is to teach students how to work online, as this is new for them as well. The faculty at the University are working hard to give students the flexibility to engage with course material on their timeframe versus a set time. Additionally, the new grade policy stays in place over the summer because it addresses the difficulty students may be faced with. Finally, the University hopes to provide more tutoring and other academic support in the new virtual environment.
