

Psychology

Students with a degree in Psychology are employed in community health centers, substance abuse treatment centers, hospitals, residential facilities, and many more areas that focus on school psychology, neuroscience, clinical psychology, and social/multicultural psychology. Many students choose to continue their education and pursue an advanced degree in clinical psychology, social work, behavioral science, and school psychology.

Schools
Community Centers
Social Services
Adolescent Residential Facilities
Substance Abuse Treatment Facilities
Hospitals
Federal or state government organizations
Non-profit organizations
Private research organizations
Outpatient clinics

COMMON EMPLOYERS

PROFESSIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

American Counseling Association
Association for Psychological Science
National Association of School Psychologists
National Board for Certified Counselors
Society for Human Resource Management
Society of Clinical Psychology
Society of Counseling Psychology

STRATEGIES ON ENTERING THE FIELD

- Gain experience through part-time or summer jobs such as camp counselor or resident adviser
- Complete an internship for academic credit
- Volunteer with organizations such as crisis hotlines, service groups, etc
- Become fluent in a second language to serve clients who do not speak English
- Earn a graduate degree in psychology, counseling, or social work
- Maintain a GPA above 3.0 for applying to graduate programs