Courses Taught

Public Speaking
An introduction to oral communication that focuses on drafting, preparing, and delivering oral presentations with emphases on critical thinking, research, the development of ideas, and organization. This is a general education requirement.

English Composition
An introduction to college-level writing that focuses on research, critical reading and thinking, argument analysis and construction, and the forms of writing used in an academic environment. This course is a general education requirement.

Technical Writing
This course is designed for students who want to develop writing skills needed in the workplace. After targeting an audience, students complete an array of assignments: memos, instructions, proposals, formal analytical reports, etc. Topics for these assignments relate to the student's major. Students learn how to format pages, incorporate visuals into their writing, and give brief oral reports based on their written assignments.

Democracy & Discourse
In this course students analyze examples of political discourse in the United States from the nation's founding to present-day campaigns using the tools of argument, persuasion theory, and discourse analysis.

The First Year Experience
An introduction to the expectations of college-level work and the intrapersonal, interpersonal, and academic skills necessary to be a successful student.

Business Communication
An introduction to the fundamentals of business communication with an emphasis on professional writing and grammar.

Liberal Arts 101: The Power of Ideas
An introduction to the liberal arts with a special focus on critical thinking and issues of social justice. This is an interdisciplinary general education requirement.
