HPR 124	2	Superheroes, political leaders, and the power of Myth	(3 crs.)Where do we turn when searching for answers? From politics to personal safety, can individuals solve the problems that society has not so far addressed? And what do we know about the people we trust (or of whom we should be wary)? The contemporary world provides us with heroes ,Äúthat don,Äôt always wear capes,Äù (but sometimes they do). This course looks at the modern emergence of the charismatic leader, and answer the question of what makes a hero special, or even needed. Should we trust heroes to champion all of their people (as we will see in the recent Black Panther) or do we need to keep a close eye on what freedom we give to those we trust (as we will explore in The Watchmen and Star Wars)? Answering these questions will provide us with a roadmap for how we can participate in movements to change and better our world, and to identify what, instead, each of us personally finds problematic or dangerous. (A2) (C1)	MoWeFr 9-9:50am	Giacomo Leoni
