

Materials:

Paper and Pens

Objective:

This is a great way to have groups get to know each other and find things in common without anyone asking direct questions.

Instructions:

1. Have each member of your group write a question on a large piece of paper (or have them already made up).
2. Have everyone crinkle up the piece of paper into a ball.
3. On the count of three, have everyone throw their ball at someone else in the group.
4. Each person will answer the "snowball" that hit them.

Variations:

1. Have questions already written out.
2. Use questions from an upcoming exam in a class that they all have together.
