IRB APPENDIX X - CONFLICT OF INTEREST IN HUMAN SUBJECTS RESEARCH

REV. MARCH 2015

Supplement for Disclosure of Financial Interest

To ensure the objectivity of the research, an investigator conducting human subjects research, has an ethical responsibility to disclose a possible conflict of interest or the possible appearance of a conflict of interest. Financial interests that must be disclosed include those held by a principal investigator, co-investigator or key personnel as well as any spouse, domestic partner or dependent child of those individuals.

This supplement to the IRB standard application should be completed and signed separately by each person with a financial interest related to the proposed study. A person with a financial interest in more than one entity related to the research should complete and sign a separate copy of this form for each entity.

This Supplement will be reviewed as appropriate by the IRB Chairperson, the IRB Administrator, the Director of the Office of Research Integrity and the Vice President of Research and Economic Development.

In addition, the IRB will evaluate whether a disclosed interest needs to be included in the consent document, or otherwise managed to address the potential for coercion.

Please answer every question. Any incomplete supplement will be rejected and returned for completion.
