

C1 – Civic Knowledge and Responsibilities Full

Preparing students to be involved citizens and active community members and professionals is an important component of the General Education Program. The Civic Knowledge and Responsibilities Learning Outcome (C1) encourages students to participate in civic discourse and activities of personal and public concern that benefit both individuals and the community as a whole. Distributed uniformly among all course levels, students have the opportunity to develop civic-mindedness through meaningful interactions on campus and within the surrounding community throughout their academic career.
